The College Board has announced the SAT will change from a paper-and-pencil test to a computer-based exam internationally from March 2023.

What are the changes?

- Number of Sections: There will be two sections only, the Reading & Writing Section and the Math Section. Each section will consist of 2 modules. It will have a total of 4 modules.
- Test Length: The paper-and-pencil test has 4 sections which last 3 hours including the break. The new test will last 2 hours and 14 minutes, plus a 10-minute break between sections.
- Test Flow: The test questions will not be in order and the reading passages will be significantly shorter. It will change to be a two-stage adaptive test. The results in the first module of each section will affect what students receive in the second module.

What are the risks?

- Same level of difficulty
- More diverse genres of reading required
- Each mistake is much costlier
